

Golden eagle

The golden eagle's beak is big. The golden eagle is gold. The golden eagle is 33 inches tall.

It lives in the desert. Golden eagles build stick nests on cliffs or in trees. They lay 2 eggs. Their eggs are white, blotched and reddish brown.

Golden eagles prey mostly upon medium sized rodents, rabbits and hares but also on birds especially game birds, reptiles, and carrion.

The golden eagle is the national emblem of Mexico. Some golden eagles eat tortoises. They carry them high in the sky and drop them on a rock.

